

Pedagogia della cura
Famiglie, comunità, legami sociali

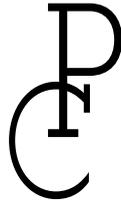

Stories that make a difference

Exploring the collective, social and political potential of narratives in adult education research

Edited by
Laura Formenti & Linden West

Pedagogia della cura
Famiglie, comunità, legami sociali

Collana diretta da
Francesca Marone

Comitato scientifico internazionale

Annie Benveniste

Université Paris 8

Micaela Castiglioni

Università degli Studi di Milano Bicocca

Mireille Cifali

Università di Ginevra

Enricomaria Corbi

Università degli Studi Suor Orsola Benincasa

Michele Corsi

Università di Macerata

Carmela Covato

Università degli Studi Roma Tre

Vasco D'Agnese

Seconda Università degli Studi di Napoli

Laura Formenti

Università degli Studi di Milano Bicocca

Maria Luisa Iavarone

Università degli Studi di Napoli Parthenope

José González Monteagudo

Università di Siviglia

Fabrizio Manuel Sirignano

Università degli Studi Suor Orsola Benincasa

Maria Grazia Riva

Università degli Studi di Milano Bicocca

Mariagrazia Contini

Università degli Studi di Bologna

I volumi pubblicati in questa collana sono preventivamente sottoposti a una doppia procedura di peer review

Stories that make a difference

Exploring the collective, social and political potential of narratives in adult education research

Edited by
Laura Formenti & Linden West

Volume stampato con il contributo del Dipartimento di Scienze Umane per la Formazione “Riccardo Massa” dell’Università degli Studi Milano-Bicocca

ESREA – European Society for Research on the Education of Adults
LHBN - Life History and Biography Network
Department of Human Sciences for Education
Milano Bicocca University

ISBN volume 978-88-6760-360-2

2016 © Pensa MultiMedia Editore s.r.l.
73100 Lecce • Via Arturo Maria Caprioli, 8 • Tel. 0832.230435
25038 Rovato (BS) • Via Cesare Cantù, 25 • Tel. 030.5310994 www.pensamultimedia.it • info@pensamultimedia.it

Contents

1. Laura Formenti and Linden West
The transformative potential of biographical research: questions and answers in a community of learners 9

PART A STORIES TO ILLUMINATE POLITICAL ISSUES, TO ENHANCE DEMOCRATIC ENGAGEMENT AND TO FOSTER PARTICIPATION

2. Linden West (Canterbury Christ Church University, UK), Stories of distress in the city: Racism, fundamentalism, recognition and the role of groups 23
3. Sofia Bergano (Polytechnic Institute of Bragança, Portugal), Political and civic participation of women in Portugal 31
4. Tine Brøndum (University of Southern Denmark, Odense, DK), Narratives of (teacher) identity, community and democratic learning 38
5. Angela Pilch Ortega (University of Graz, Austria), Cooperative learning and social inequality in Chiapas 46
6. Rebecca Tee (Canterbury Christ Church University, UK), Using auto/biographical narration to understand the role of political inheritance in applied civics 55
7. Chul-In Yoo (Jeju National University, South Korea), Narrative truth, personal healing and social truth: The Jeju April 3 incident in Korea 62

PART B ARTS AND MEDIA IN RESEARCH AND PRACTICE, TO FOSTER PARTICIPATION AND COLLECTIVE LEARNING

8. Francesco Cappa (Milano Bicocca University, Italy), The learning scene. Turning the academic space in a collective space of play 71
9. Cindy Hanson (University of Regina, Canada), Stitching the stories together. Intergenerational learning among indigenous women 78
10. Diane Laurier (Université du Québec à Chicoutimi, Canada), Le récit de création pour favoriser le développement artistique et identitaire de jeunes adultes autochtones 85
11. Helena Oikarinen-Jabai (Aalto University, Finland), Transforming images and narrations of Finnishness in a participatory performative art-based research setting 92
12. Mike Spence (Canterbury Christ Church University, UK) Videogames revived the social media star 101

13. Alice Tuppen-Corps (De Montfort University, Leicester, UK), 'Point. Forty' dialogic artwork. An exploration of the personal (and collective) impact of augmented storytelling 108
14. Alessia Vitale (Milano Bicocca University, Italy), From counselling to workshop: The aesthetic experience in ecological guidance 116
15. Outi Ylitapio-Mäntylä and Mari Mäkiranta (University of Lapland, Finland), Producing feminist knowledge in an animation: 'A short story about feminism in Russia' 124

PART C

USING ARTS AND MEDIA TO ENHANCE

AND ENRICH SELF-NARRATION IN RESEARCH AND/OR TRAINING

16. Elisabetta Biffi and Franca Zuccoli (Milano Bicocca University, Italy), 'It is not the glue that makes the collage' (Max Ernst): Training in educational research as an artistic process 135
17. Patricia Gouthro (Mount Saint Vincent University, Halifax, Canada), Using biographical research to explore what really matters to fiction authors. Intersections between fiction and biography 143
18. Elena Mignosi (Université de Palerme, Italie), Se raconter à travers la danse-mouvement-thérapie: un parcours de formation pour des jeunes futurs formateurs 150
19. Alba Naccari (University Foro Italico, Rome, Italy), Dancing mythical stories to dance more actively one's own history 158
20. Valeria Napolitano (Université 'Federico II', Naples, Italie), La formation des enseignants précaires par la narration d'expériences: Entre cinéma et écriture réflexive 164
21. Yvonne Sliiep (University of Kwa-Zulu Natal, South Africa), Poetry as dialogue. Navigating the storms of life. 172

PART D

STORIES TO SUPPORT DEVELOPMENT

AND RELATIONSHIPS IN THE COMMUNITY

22. Alan Bainbridge and Victoria Stirrup (Canterbury Christ Church University, UK), Narratives beyond the backyard: A case study on support for a community sustainability project 183
23. Sabina Fontana (University of Catania, Italy), Understanding deaf community through narration 190
24. Francesca Marone (University 'Federico II', Naples, Italy), Intergenerational networks. Genres and generations in the net: stories, links, connections 196
25. Susanna Ronconi (Free University of Autobiography, Anghiari, Italy), The school of barefoot biographers. Training for facilitators towards a self-reflective and more inclusive society 203

PART E
STORIES TO EXPLORE IDENTITIES, TO CELEBRATE VOICE, AND TO PROPITIATE SELF-AWARENESS,
MEANING AND TRANSFORMATION

- | | | |
|-----|---|-----|
| 26. | Helen Anderson (University of Warwick, UK), Life story as a process of transformative acceptance: Lived experience of highly skilled visible minorities in Canada | 213 |
| 27. | Anne Chant (Canterbury Christ Church University, UK), The teller, the tale and the told. Re-membling and re-writing the self | 220 |
| 28. | Rob Evans (Otto von Guericke University, Magdeburg, Germany), Life is normal in Donetsk. Narratives of distant conflicts and young adults' learning biographies | 227 |
| 29. | Laura Formenti (Milano Bicocca University, Italy), Learning to live. The pattern which connects education and dis/orientation | 234 |
| 30. | Alessandra Indelicato (Milano Bicocca University, Italy), Psychè and Pò-lis. Philosophical practices as a search for our truths | 242 |
| 31. | Laura Mazzoli Smith and Karen Laing (Newcastle University, UK), Creating a transformational space through narrative. Looked after young people tell their life stories | 247 |
| 32. | Eryn Thomas (University of New England, Australia), Telling and listening: Reconnecting people's learning with their lives... and society | 256 |
| 33. | Skyller Walkes (Texas State University, USA), My words resonate louder from my mouth | 263 |
| 34. | Hazel Wright (Anglia Ruskin University, UK), Echoes in the narrative | 271 |

PART F
STORIES TO ENRICH OUR DIVERSE VIEWS AND PRACTICES OF LEARNING

- | | | |
|-----|---|-----|
| 35. | Marianne Horsdal (University of Southern Denmark), The intergenerational impact of the experience of learning | 281 |
| 36. | Marianne Høyen (Aarhus University, Denmark), Teaching about nature across generations | 290 |
| 37. | Andrea Galimberti (Milano Bicocca University, Italy) and Katja Vanini De Carlo (Geneva University, Switzerland), PHD – Processes Hosting Differences. A dialogue about the transformative potential of telling stories | 297 |
| 38. | Federica Jorio and Luca Morini (Milano Bicocca University, Italy), A (less) lonely place for researching | 304 |
| 39. | Teresa Manconi et Eleonora Salvadori (Université de Pavia, Italie), Les autobiographies langagières pour la valorisation des identités plurielles | 312 |
| 40. | Vera Sheridan (Dublin City University, Ireland), Refugee autobiographies: Angolan mature students contributing to diversity in HE in Ireland | 318 |
| 41. | Eleanor Stevenson (University of York, UK) and Jacqueline Stevenson (Sheffield Hallam University, UK) Exploring mature students' 'voice' in UK higher education | 326 |

PART G

STORIES TO TRANSFORM CARE PRACTICES

42. Micaela Castiglioni (Milano Bicocca University, Italy), Narrative/writing practices in healthcare and educational contexts 335
43. Manuela Gallerani (University of Bologna, Italy), Narrative medicine and stories of illness: Caring for the sick requires active listening 341
44. Maria Benedetta Gambacorti-Passerini (Milano Bicocca, Italy), Images and symbols to narrate educational work in the Italian Mental Health Services 348
45. Lorenza Garrino (University of Turin, Italy), Isabella Brandino (ASL TO5, Italy), Giulia Idile (ASL TO5, Italy), and Valerio Dimonte (University of Turin, Italy) Analysis of nurses' representations of care and the care relationship in an in-home care context in Piedmont, Italy 357
46. Elena Pont (Université de Genève, Suisse), Le récit de vie: Un instrument d'émancipation des représentations de genre et de handicap dans la réhabilitation professionnelle des paraplégiques 364

PART H

EXTRA-ORDINARY STORIES TO CELEBRATE 'ORDINARY' LIVES

47. Jean-Michel Baudouin (Université de Genève, Suisse), Démocratie et puissances du récit 373
48. Maria Carmela Agodi and Giuseppe Luca De Luca Picione (University 'Federico II', Naples, Italy), Neither subversive stories nor hegemonic tales: Stories making a difference in adult education for social empowerment 380
49. Caterina Benelli (University of Messina, Free University of Autobiography, Italy), Auto-biographies of 'unsung heroes' 387
50. Laurence Bonnafous (University of Rouen, France), Can social innovation emerge through everyday life stories at fourth age? 393
51. Alison Fielding (Canterbury Christ Church University, UK), Generations of strong women: The impact of social class on the educational and learning experiences of four generations of women 400

19. Dancing mythical stories to dance more actively one's own history

Alba G.A. Naccari

University Foro Italico, Rome, Italy

In this chapter, I introduce some aspects of an original approach in education, integrating bodily mediation and narration as privileged dimensions for learning and increasing awareness and decision-making capacity, in different moments of the life cycle, especially in adulthood. This model and methodology can be defined as ‘symbolic-anthropological’ bodily mediation® (Naccari, 2004; 2012; 2015b); it places moving symbols and narrative-mythical archetypes at the heart of educative activities, reworking and integrating from a pedagogical point of view the theories and methodologies created by the contemporary dance-movement-therapy and the art of dance (see among others: Chodorow, 1991; Schott-Billman, 1994; Laban, 1950).

The choice of symbols and narrative themes focuses a specific moment of the participants’ lives. All the activities, proposed through a narrative plot, are conceived as a privileged dimension to awaken different components of a person, considering the complexity of relational, cultural and political interactions in which they are immersed. Through the dancing comparison to a mythical plot, workshops’ participants can rework the autobiographical fragments corresponding to their experience, become more self-aware and enhance a sense of personal identity, develop personal power and find the courage to change their lives and social situations.

The main context of application and study of the method is the work in education, research, training and supervision carried out by Eurinome, the School of bodily and expressive mediation pedagogy in Perugia-Palmi (www.danzasimbolica.altervista.org), operative since 2006. The school brought about some action-research activities to investigate and evaluate the educational outcomes of the proposed approach (Naccari, 2012; 2015). Data were gathered through narrative and art-based tools, partly coincident with the participants' choreographic and narrative production during workshops. Further refinement of data was obtained by implementing an hermeneutic circular method, confronting narrative-art-based data with narrative-observational data, written and shared by educators in a special logbook (Naccari 2012). Until now, reports support transferability and corroboration of this educational method in adulthood.

Stories for social awareness

The educational reworking of the method is centred on different kinds of growth (corporeal, affective, social, intellectual, ethical) and the participants' capacity to take care of themselves and others, to develop their own personal and social life. The philosophical background that contributed to the theoretical model comes from theories on dialogue, as an important opportunity for social and political awareness (Buber, 1984), and from personalist theories. The psychological background is based on the value of symbolic imagination with its educational and emancipatory power (Hillman, 1983; Jung, 1976). In pedagogy we used and reworked studies about narrative and autobiographical training (see among others: Demetrio, 1996; Mc Adams 1988, 1993).

The philosophy of dialogue addresses human interaction as a reality which involves the person as a whole being; it requires a kind of presence where the spoken word plays only a small part, and becomes more significant if it is a narrative one (Buber, 1984). Imagination, thanks to an archetypal plot, coloured by intercultural and transcultural values, suggests behaviours and insights that are fundamental for personal and social development. In narrative pedagogy, the different autobiographic modes are educational in themselves, since the choice of events and words to weave our memories reveals a point of view and by naming such events we understand them better and give a new meaning to what has happened.

In the symbolic-anthropological approach, movement and dance are a total word, since they involve the whole person and enhance imagination by archetypes and narrative symbols (Naccari, 2012). Narrative, borrowed from great mythical traditions, is a kind of playful integrating background for the proposed movement. It determines a specific activation of the participants, by selecting their possible experiences. The personal positioning, through dance and movement, within a narrative plot allows a person to rework his/her own way to confront that theme, the way it was experienced in the past or could be lived in the future. This reworking opportunity shows an important mode of self-training in adult education.

During adult life, [in truth] we represent and we constantly tell our personal history by using the same categories that control fairy tales and myths, [...] and the archetypal themes make possible the series of successive 'narratives', and then the continuous reinterpretation and understanding of our personal history (Moscato, 2002: 85).

The virtuous circle between mythical and personal narrative: Workshop elements

In the circularity between mythical narrative and personal reworking, bodily mediation allows to get into the archetype through intuition and imagination as human resources. These resources are implemented as abilities, attitudes, styles, new ways of being, especially ways of social and political living. When the educator proposes a symbol to the participants, inviting them to improvise on it and teaching some traditional dances based on it, the symbol itself is actualized and personalized by everyone who is dancing it. For example, by dancing the archetype of the tree (typical of a lot of mythical narratives as Axis Mundi), everyone is able to perceive what it is to be rooted, welcoming one's natural human reality, to experience the opening of one's own branches towards the sky as an ideal inspiration, and the harmony of being one with the forest. The tree, however, could also be the olive tree under which one played as a child, or the great scented lime tree I see in front of my window when I work at my computer, or even the strong and friendly great oak tree that I would like to be for my pupils, students and clients. The symbol proposed from outside (circularly) connects with the inner one, activating personal resonances and meanings, whose degree of awareness greatly varies. Participants however, and some more than others, will dance the power of the tree to rebalance the high and the low, heaven and earth. (Naccari 2012: 75)

Therefore, by creatively comparing us to the characters and subjects of a specific mythical narrative symbol, everyone can learn to turn those attitudes one feels deficient in, or can better understand the less explored aspects.

In this specific setting, each proposal is seamlessly connected to the next on the same narrative archetype, to allow the identification of the specific theme. At the beginning of each workshop, the educator can tell something on the chosen plot, then the warming up is physical but also relational and emotional, while it introduces the chosen symbolic-narrative theme with the correspondent gestures. After warming up, we often propose an ethnic dance, that condenses the same symbolic image, because the dance enhances a sense of belonging to the group and suggests some gestures related to the theme. The next phase, called exploration, is the central part in which one fully immerses in the experience of movement in the proposed plot, through open improvisation. This can be emotionally intense and personal identification with proposed activities can be total.

At the end of the movement experience, we facilitate the possibility to remember what has been perceived thanks to its artistic reworking, which is often a narrative-biographical text, written as a personal resonance or a new story on the theme. After that, at the very end of the workshop, we have verbalization: everyone can choose an experience to be shared with the others, to understand it and integrate it within one's inner world and daily-social life. In this phase, the educator can give philosophical, cultural and social references about the symbols and narratives that have been explored (something similar to Jung's 'cultural amplification method', 1977). Listeners are free to choose and select, among the stories, what they feel resonance with, according to their lives and histories.

For an holistic approach: stories that can make a difference

The holistic approach of the method refers not only to the person as a whole being, but also to the relational, social, political, cultural and natural contexts in which everyone is involved by a system of actions, reactions and responses (Morin, 1973). Last but not least, it refers to the cycle of life, that involves each one with different evolutionary crises and tasks (Erikson, 1997; Levinson, 1978; 1996; Sheehy, 1996; Naccari 2010). In education, it is always crucial to consider the system of relationships in which people are inserted, and to develop the relationships established in a group of client-student for the learning process. This is particularly true in bodily mediation where the corporeal, relational, expressive and emotional dimensions are central. There is a peculiar aim to promote awareness of the specific geographical, social and political context in which one lives, with personal, natural and collective spaces, times and rhythms, with which one must try to be in harmony or try to change. According to a pedagogy of the life cycle (Naccari, 2010), the adult person should/could be capable of caring and being responsible towards other people, especially the younger generations, and towards social and political life. In our times, however, the adult generation has been defined as the ‘ego generation’ (Sheehy, 1996: 57), or a narcissistic generation living on the fulfilment of selfish needs, people in a position of power, concerned to protect themselves instead of the others. The development of individuality has become individualism. Dorian Gray is the sad and realistic archetype of this generation... This represents a true pedagogical emergency which we have to cope with. Bodily and narrative mediation workshops can help to assert creatively the individual’s uniqueness, beyond the prevailing individualistic and competitive attitude, hence building more responsible social presence. These workshops propose and develop narratives in which everyone can find oneself, rediscovering a more authentic personal identity, feeling interdependence with all beings, resizing the need for recognition to become truly helpful for the Other (Buber, 1993). As I suggested in another essay (Naccari, 2014), several myths can be proposed to support the educational circularity between mythical and biographic narration in adulthood, allowing the development of an ethical, social and politically conscious attitude: Puer and Senex, Chiron, Demeter, Euriclea, the Tree of Life, The Shaman, the Founding Hero...

As an example, a workshop centred on the archetype of the Shaman can awaken the aptitude to understand the invisible connections among all things and responsibility towards all things. As a minister of religion and medicine man, in fact, the Shaman takes care of the well-being of the individuals and communities in their essential interdependencies. The Shaman is also substantially a guardian, a witness of the myths founding cultural identity. A dancing and writing workshop on this subject can allow personal reworking of these attitudes, consequently it can be educative, since it awakens the ability to take care of civilization, hidden in the maze of many contemporary adults. Everything proposed can be truly educative if it is made with the intent, the planning and the specific methodologies that foster a virtuous circularity between collective and personal history; this requires a recursive method in which time, space and actors are as heterogeneous and multiple as the people who narrate and dance.

References

- Buber M. (1984). Das dialogische Prinzip. Heidelberg: Lambert Schneider.
- Chodorow J. (1991). Dance therapy and depth psychology. Londra and New York: Routledge.
- Demetrio D. (1996). Raccontarsi. Milano: Raffaello Cortina.
- Erikson E. (1997). The life cycle completed. A review. New York and London: W.W. Norton.
- Hillman J. (1983). Healing fiction. New York, Washington: Spring Publications.
- Jung C. G. (1976). Die Archetypen und das kollektive Unbewusste. Olten: Walter Verlag.
- Laban R. (1950). The mastery of movement on the stage. London: Macdonald & Evans.
- Levinson D. J. (1978). The seasons of a man's life. New York: Ballantine Books.
- Levinson D. J. (1996). The seasons of a woman's life. New York: Alfred A. Knopf.
- McAdams D.P. (1988). Power intimacy and the life story. New York and London: The Guilford Press.
- McAdams D.P. (1993). The stories we live by. New York, London: The Guilford Press.
- Morin E. (1973). Le paradigme perdu: la nature humaine. Paris: Editions du Seuil.
- Moscato M.T. (2002). La trasformazione adulta: modelli teorici e figure mitiche. In A.M. Mariani & M. Santerini (Eds.), Educazione adulta. Manuale per una formazione permanente. Milano: Unicopli.
- Naccari A.G.A. (2004). Le vie della danza. Pedagogia narrativa, danze etniche e danzamovimentoterapia. Perugia: Morlacchi.
- Naccari A.G.A. (2010). Pedagogia del ciclo di vita in età adulta. Comprendere ed orientare le crisi e i cambiamenti nel corso dell'esistenza. Roma: Anicia.
- Naccari A.G.A. (Ed.) (2012). La mediazione corporea per un'educazione olistica. Milano: Guerini.
- Naccari A.G.A. (2014). Dalla cura di sé alla cura del mondo, Percorsi educativi in età adulta. Bollettino della Fondazione Nazionale Vito Fazio Allmayer, XLIII, 1, 47-73.
- Naccari A.G.A. (2015). Per una valutazione ecologica nell'educazione a mediazione corporea. In Seminario SIPED Oltre i confini lungo i margini, Bologna.
- Naccari A.G.A. (2015b). Symbolic-Anthropological expressive mediation. For a holistic-intercultural education. TOJET Special Issue August 2015.
- Schott Billmann F. (1994). Quand la danse guerit. Paris: La Recherche en Danse.
- Sheehy G. (1995). New passages. New York: Random House.